

Currently Europe has no common policies towards the Mediterranean area.

In particular the enormous flows of migrants represent an extraordinary challenge for the EU and future of Mediterranean countries.

The Conference aims at an assessment of the Euro-Mediterranean policies and of the causes of their failure. On the ground of this awareness it will be important to point out the criteria for a new partnership with the countries of the southern shore of Mediterranean and to emphasize the relation between human development and economic development and the relationship between democracy and development. A new partnership ought to acknowledge the lasting cultural legacy of colonialism and be based on relations of interdependence rather than conditionality, in order to identify common interests and concerns that reflect the demands of the peoples in the common Mediterranean space.
